

TUESDAY, JUNE 3, 1834.

EDITORIAL.—We have placed upon the First Page the opinion and Protest of Mr. Jefferson, in relation to the relative rights of the Executive and Senate, to which we ask the readers' particular attention.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS—No. 154.

Washington, May 29th, 1834.—The House has finally fixed the 30th of June, for the day of adjournment, after spending the day in debating the subject.—The final vote was by a majority of upwards of forty.—Mr. Adams having formerly voted for an earlier day, changed his opinion; and reasons for changing his vote, viz: that there was much important business to be transacted, and the Report of the Bank Committee, if acted upon, would occupy much of the time. In stating his reasons, he took occasion to intimate an opinion about the propriety of presuming to bring the President and Directors of the Bank (they being citizens of another State,) before the bar of the House. Every person, except the citizens of the District of Columbia, is a citizen of another State; and if Congress have any authority over any citizen of any State, they have over those of every State. John Anderson was a citizen of Detroit, when he was brought before the House for bribery; and Governor Houston was a citizen of Tennessee, (O! Lord!) when he was summoned to the bar for contempt. Mr. Adams went all lengths for the arrest of Gov. Houston, and thought Congress then omnipotent.

Mr. Thomas of Maryland, Chairman of the Bank Committee, replied to Mr. Adams, and cited Gov. Houston's case; and deprecated the remarks of Mr. Adams, inasmuch as they were calculated to convey an opinion on the subject, before it had been deliberated upon by the House. Mr. Thomas is a very animated, and eloquent speaker; and commands the intense attention of the House. I am perfectly convinced, that any man who has a good voice, a courteous and respectful manner, will always secure the attention of the House.—There are but few who have fine voices and still fewer whose manner is sufficiently pleasing and respectful to fix attention. This is the reason why the House is generally so inattentive to their speakers.

The Senate were engaged most of the day in debating about pensions and pensioners, under some motion or resolution. I understand, offered by Mr. Preston, who took the lead in the debate; and endeavored to show that there were a great many more pensioners than there could have been surviving soldiers. He found none to concur in his views; Mr. Webster set him right; and Mr. Sprague endeavored to show that Mr. Webster, and every body was right, I believe, but Mr. Preston. South Carolina always goes against pension systems in general, but professes to go for the real old revolutionaries in particular.

The Senate went into Executive business; and it is understood the nomination of Mr. Tappan, as District Judge, for Ohio, was rejected.

I promised to recur to Col. Benton's argument in the Senate yesterday, on his motion for postponing the consideration of Mr. Clay's new series of Resolutions for a week.

Col. B. said the Bank had expended large sums of money to diffuse information among the people—and when information was now called for, they refused to give it; that the committee of the Bank Directors gave 40 pages of testimony as a single point, upon which they now refuse to be examined—(he alluded to the report of the 12 Directors.) He said in this report, they had charged the President of the United States with trying to get possession of the Bank—and that there had been a meeting of the political chiefs in 1829 for that purpose; and as they could not succeed in their design, the President turned against the Bank. He said this was either true or false; if true, the Directors ought to be willing to be examined—if false, the people ought to know it. And why do the Directors keep back, if it be true? Are the Senate, he asked, to stand between the Bank and the House, and negative all inquiry? He hoped not—and trusted they would postpone the consideration of the Resolutions till the House had acted on the report of their Bank Committee. His motion, however, did not prevail; but I do not think much will be said in the Senate before the House get to the Committee's Report, which stands for next Tuesday.

REIS EFFENDI.

The impartial observer of the "signs of the times" cannot but have noticed that the partisans of the Bank have altered their tone materially within the last few weeks. They are not half as ripe for "revolution" as they were, and talk a great deal less about marching to Washington to "dethrone the tyrant." They have learned, from the best of all teachers, experience, that their intelligent countrymen set too much value upon their political rights and privileges, and the government which protects them in their enjoyment, to give such treasonable propositions any thing like favor or encouragement. The blood and treasure of the revolution were wasted to little purpose, if the institutions they purchased are to be weighed against the claims of the odious and overgrown monopoly, that is now striving to rule a nation, upon whose escutcheon its very existence is a blot. The bought editors and orators who have become the property of the Bank by "fair business transactions," and who have vied with each other in their endeavors to enhance the pretended value of the institution that owns them, overstepped the mark, and awakened a spirit of research and inquiry among the people, which has already proved fatal to the hopes of the golden idol they worship.

"Eighty-three justices of the peace of the Tory party had their heads taken clear off by the Connecticut Legislature in one day, and Whig heads neatly substituted."

The above paragraph is from a distinguished Whig print in New York, that has had much to say about the "proscriptive policy" of the present national administration. It may serve as an index to the sincerity of the opposition in their lamentations about "proscription," and as a fair sample of the liberality they have always exercised, when they possessed the power. If a Jackson Legislature had done such a deed, it would have been denounced as an unjust and arbitrary exercise of power—but performed by the party claiming "all the learning and all the religion," it is quite a different affair.

In alluding to the late melancholy death of Mr. J. A. Stone, the dramatist, the Philadelphia Intelligencer says—

"That this sad close of his life ensued from physical causes, is abundantly evident from his condition. His labors had been every way profitable, and so continued. The play of Metanora alone had produced, it is said, nearly one hundred thousand dollars for its hero; and Mr. Stone's share of this had been, and continued to be, very liberal indeed. His death arose, unquestionably, not from any acute design, caused by a desponding spirit; but from the effects of bodily weakness and too great and studious exertion, upon a mind naturally, to all appearance, cheerful and serene."

John A. Harker, Esq. has resigned the editorship of the Delaware Gazette and Watchman, in a neat and feeling valedictory. D. A. J. Upham is his successor.

POLICE COURT.

Audacious and Extraordinary Assault.—Patrick Foley, a hump-backed fiddler, was arrested on Sunday morning, for committing a most singular and villainous assault on a respectable married woman (whose husband was absent) in a boarding-house, in Hamilton street. The singular outrage will be best understood by giving the testimony of the witnesses:—

Mrs. S.—A little after 5 o'clock, on Sunday morning, that man came into the room, where I was in bed, and as there were some trunks in the room that belonged to other boarders, I thought he might be one of them in pursuit of one; but as I did not hear him go out, I thought strange of it, and raised myself up a little to see what he was about, when I found him standing by my bed, undressed. I was so much confused at first, I could not speak. I then called out for my brother, as loud as I could, thinking to alarm the man and drive him away, but instead of that, he jumped into the bed, and when I tried to make a noise, stopped my mouth with something in his hand [handkerchief]. When at last Mrs. B. came to my assistance, I was so terrified that I could not explain to her what the matter was.

Mrs. B.—I heard her cry out, and when I went into the room I supposed it was her husband in bed; as he was kind of struggling, I thought he had a fit, and I laid my hand on his shoulder and found that he appeared to be all curled up, and looking at his face, I said, "how terribly he is altered!"

3d Wit.—Lodged on the same story—I heard a woman in great distress—I shall never outlive the piercing tones of her voice. Mrs. B. came and told us there was a man in Mrs. B's room, and we went in and found him there. He tried to laugh us out of it, and said—"Never mind this little rub, let me go—I wish you good morning," &c.

When arrested, he questioned Mr. Coolidge closely about his authority to do so, and when arraigned, told the Judge he "had done nothing out of the way," and appeared to be utterly insensible of the heinous nature of his offence. He was remanded to jail, without being called upon to plead, and the witnesses and documents were sent directly to the Grand Jury, whose session had just commenced.

William Goodwin, one of the Jack-Junks of the Potomac, and a pretty fair sample of the crew, while beating up Washington street about 12, on Saturday night, alone, was hailed by a couple of merchant-hubbers, who made some disparaging remark about his frigate. In general, it is a less dangerous affront to abuse a man-a-war's-man's wife, than his ship, and so the merchant-men found their cost on this occasion, when little Billy batted their ribs and loins, and the adjacent regions of their bodies corporeal, with a shotted colt, till they called the watch to their assistance. Unfortunately for him, when the watch bore down, he had not let off all his fight, and could not resist the opportunity of planting a fist-dab in the mumps of one of his mercantile brethren.—$3.00 and costs.

Stephen Knights was also examined for an assault on Andrew J. Chandler, the watchman who arrested Goodwin. It appeared that Knights had witnessed the preceding affray, and being aware that the other party commenced it, he thought 'twas 'at fair to meddle with Potomac, and ordered Chandler to let him go—but as the latter did not obey, he collared him, and urged Goodwin to escape. For this chivalrous interference, in behalf of the oppressed, against the strong arm of "brief authority," he was ordered to recognise in $75, for his appearance at the Municipal Court, where he will probably learn that collaring a watchman, like all other acts of instinctive humanity, is a very unprofitable undertaking.

"Altered."—Mr. S. the husband, quite a good-looking man, was in court, during the examination, and, contrasted with the hunch-backed, blue-bearded dwarf, was indeed "Hyperion to a Satyr." Foley had been boarding at a house on the opposite side of the street, for some time previous.

Artillery Election.—The Ancient and Honorable Artillery celebrated their 196th Anniversary yesterday, under the command of Col. E. G. Prescott. The procession formed at the State House, about noon, and marched under escort to the Church in Chancery place, where an appropriate discourse was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Hedge, of Cambridge. The Company and their guests dined at Faneuil Hall—and after the customary parade, &c. upon the Common, the Company supped at the same place.

The Baltimoreans seem to have taken the Balloon-fever the natural way. Since Mr. Mill's successful ascension, two competitors have appeared to dispute the prize of victory with him, one of them a lady, who closes her advertisement with the following pathetic appeal:—

"Come all you gallant citizens
And join heart and hand,
To assist aspiring genius,
In a female of this land—
Let not the Arts and Sciences
To man be all confined;
Ye citizens of Baltimore
Now prove your liberal mind."

It can hardly be necessary for us to appeal to the gallantry of our theatre-going friends, in favor of the young lady who takes a benefit this evening at the Tremont. Mrs. Duff, whilom a favorite here, was to appear upon the occasion of her daughter's benefit, but will be prevented by indisposition. Nevertheless, we hope to see a good house, for Miss Duff deserves it, and has exhibited good taste in the selection of entertainments for the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood made their farewell appearance in New York on Friday evening last. Their correct and winning deportment both in public and private life, has won them many friends—and it is a matter of universal regret that they find it necessary to return to England so soon, and leave a country, where they are so generally admired.

We are requested by the editor of the "Traveler" to say, that the intimation in the card signed "James Worster" in yesterday's Post, is altogether deceptive; no prosecution having been commenced.

"Ticket Night."—Under this mysterious term, the clever fellows, who keep the doors of the Warren Theatre, take a benefit this evening.

The Legislature of New Hampshire will convene at Concord to-morrow.

CONGRESS.

Nothing of interest transpired in the Senate on Friday. In the House of Representatives, Mr. SPEAKER STEVENSON rose and informed the House that he had taken the Chair, though still laboring under severe and continued indisposition, for the purpose of opening the House and preventing any delay in its business, and likewise for the purpose of announcing his determination of resigning the Speaker's Chair and his seat in Congress. This he proposed doing on Monday next, at eleven o'clock. He had formed this resolution under a deep sense of duty, and because his state of health rendered it impossible for him to discharge in person the laborious duties of the Chair; and he had, therefore, deemed it respectful and proper to give this early notice of his intention to retire.

Two of the trustees of the Bank of Maryland have published a statement of its affairs, addressed to its creditors, from which it appears that the ascertained liabilities of the Bank on the 9th of May, amounted to $1,683,218; its resources consist of $1,001,661.46 available in discharge of debts due the Bank—$617,818.24 doubtful—and $65,750.58 disputed—total $1,685,230.58. The trustees state, that they have not yet received from Mr. Poultny any statement of his own affairs, in answer to their application for information from him—Mr. Thomas on his part, declining uniting with the others in their report.

The Schr. Friendship. Capt. Pratt, in coming up yesterday, when abreast of the Castle, fell in with a boat bottom upwards, and near the boat, picked up two fur hats. The boat was painted green, with "Billow, of Boston," on her stern.

Joseph White, Esq. lately confirmed by the Senate, declines acting as a Director of the Bank of the United States.

Auraria, Georgia, April 26.—Mining Operations.—As far as we have been enabled to ascertain the Mining business throughout the gold regions thus far, the present season, it has succeeded beyond the most sanguine expectations. The miners all tell us they realize from 15 to 20 per cent. more on their labor, than they did at this season last year. Col. Roswell King, agent of the Darien Bank, sustains these statements. He informs us that he has purchased more gold within five of the last weeks, than he did in five months last year, ending the first of August.

We had the pleasure, a few days since, of witnessing the operations on this mine, and examining the ores taken from it. We venture the assertion that ores of an equal richness, are not to be found in any vein yet opened in the southern country. A shaft upwards of 100 feet has been sunk upon the vein; at this depth, we are informed by these gentlemen, that the ore is equal in richness to that in any other part in the vein.—It is from 6 to 9 feet in width, extending in a direct line N. E. and S. W. from 3 to 500 yards; at which points, it seems to be shut out by a sudden interruption of a vein of hornblende rocks. This vein is embedded in the mica slate, of ashy color, which produces to the touch a sensation similar to that produced by fine soap stone. The ores present a variety of colors, such as lead, grey, yellow, black and variegated, produced, we imagine, from a combination of different oxides, such as iron, pyrites, arsenic, &c. interspersed with red and yellow ochres. The gold is seldom perceptible to the eye.

Messrs. Ware and Matthews have recently erected a small stamping mill, for reducing the ores, which has just gone into operation. They made with 20 hands in the 16 of the first hours of its operation, 414 dwts of gold.—Princess Ann (Md.) Herald.

Safe and Sound.—The Bank of Delaware, at Wilmington, was incorporated in the year 1795. Its capital was $110,000, in shares of $200 each. Its annual dividends have been 10 per cent., with the exception of one year, when they amounted to but 8 per cent. The current price of shares is now $360. It has a surplus on hand of $98,000. It has on hand specie $60,000, due from Bank of United States, $78,000; from other banks in Philadelphia, about $20,000. Its bills in circulation amount to $148,000, and its deposits average about $120,000. The bank had lately returned to it, four bills of one hundred dollars each, which were issued during the last century.—J. our. Com.

Another Bank Broke.—owing to the removal of the deposits.—The Philadelphia Herald states that Captain Taylor, of the sloop Union, from Alexandria, bound to Philadelphia, reports that the bank of the Upper level of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal gave away on Saturday morning about 3 o'clock, and that nearly all the water had run out, which had rendered the canal impassable. The Union will be compelled to come round by sea.

Commerce of Quebec.—Business in this city has commenced with great activity. On the 22d inst. no less than 135 vessels, with a burden of 37,585 tons, had entered at that port from Europe; 88, with a burden of 25,244 tons, had cleared out; and 47, with a tonnage of 12,341, remained. The exports, of every kind, for the colonies, are likely to be as large, if not larger, than any previous year.

A gentleman of Washington county, Maryland, while travelling through the state of Ohio, lately discovered, near Newark, a man by the name of Dean breaking stones on the road side, whom he immediately recognised as an individual who had fled from the country in which he resided, fourteen years ago, to escape a prosecution for murder. He was forthwith arrested, and has since been identified by another person, though he entirely denies any knowledge of the cause of his imprisonment. He was to be removed to Maryland for trial.—Eve Star.

Suicide.—The coroner, last evening, was called upon to view the body of a man named Peter Tryall, at the corner of Cherry and Schuylkill eighth streets, who had committed suicide by cutting his throat in a most shocking manner. Medical aid was called, but to no avail. He was about 46 years of age, and had been in a state of mental derangement for five or six weeks. He was a man of very regular habits.—Phil. Int.

Suicide.—A young man of respectable connections named William Horton, put an end to his life, at Tammany Hall, on the night of the 26th instant, by taking Opium. He retired to his room early in the evening, and when found in his room yesterday morning, life was totally extinct. The coroner was summoned, an inquest held, and a verdict rendered in accordance with the facts. No cause is assigned for the commission of the act.—N. Y. Times.

John Quincy Adams is flooding the country with his posthumous speech, franked by himself. The venerable ex-President has obtained a situation among the employes of the Bank, and franks by contract—so much the wheelbarrow load.—Pennsylvania.

The term of service of six of the present members of the United States Senate will expire with this Congress, and it is believed that at least twelve of the vacancies will be filled by Jackson men.—Genius of Liberty.

Astonishing Feat.—A few days since a young gentleman of Philadelphia, passed round Allen's Race Course seven times in fifty four and a half minutes.—The course is a mile round, and it is supposed he could have performed the distance of 8 miles within an hour.

Foreign Miscellany.

The effects of Woman's eye upon an Executioner. Ann Boleyn, being on the scaffold, would not consent to have her eyes covered with a bandage, saying that she had no fear of death. All that the divine who assisted at the execution could obtain from her, was, that she would shut her eyes; but as she was opening them at every moment, the executioner could not bear their mild and tender glances; fearful of missing his aim, he was obliged to invent an expedient to behold the queen. He drew off his shoes, and approached her silently; while he was at her left hand, another person advanced at her right, who made a great noise in walking, so that this circumstance drawing the attention of Ann, she turned her face from the executioner, who was enabled to strike the fatal blow, without being disturbed by that spirit of affecting resignation which shone in the eyes of Ann Boleyn.—D'Israeli's Curiosities of Literature.

Aged Actress.—A farce called the "Half-pay Officer," by Charles Molloy, was brought out at Drury-lane theatre in 1720; and to Mrs. Frier, (an Irishwoman, who had quitted the stage from the reign of Charles II.) was assigned the part of an old grandmother. In the bills it was mentioned—"The part of Lady Richlowe to be performed by Peg Fryer, who has not appeared on the stage these 50 years." The character in the farce was supposed to be a very old woman, and Peg exerted her utmost abilities. The farce being ended, she was brought again upon the stage to dance a jig at the age of 85. She came tottering in, and seemed much fatigued; but on a sudden, the music striking up the Irish trot, she danced and footed it almost as nimbly as any girl of 20. She afterwards kept a public-house in Tottenham-court-road, where she resided until her decease, which took place in November, 1747, aged 116 years.—Mirror.

An old Austrian soldier, father of a numerous family, whose pension was inadequate to their support, lately presented a petition to the Emperor; his Majesty wrote in the margin, "pay the bearer 5,000 florins." The cashier could not believe his eyes, the Emperor usually giving in such cases 500 florins. The director was not less surprised: they repaired with the petition to the Royal cabinet. His Majesty smiled, and said, "I see I have put a zero too much, but let it remain; give the father 500 florins, and put the 4,500 florins to the account of his children."

Sale at Enmore Castle.—The sale of the furniture at Enmore Castle terminated last week. The bed, which was the property of Queen Caroline, and on which she died, fetched eleven guineas. The old state bedstead, covered with crimson Genoa velvet, curtains and draperies en suite, £21; the lounge chair, on castors, with tambour work, black velvet covers, trimmed with silver, formerly the property of George II., given to his Majesty George III., and presented by him to Queen Caroline, when Princess of Wales, were sold for 11 guineas.

Keep me from my friends.—Mr. J. (in his juvenilia) went to a club, and as his appearance was anything but respectable, he borrowed a pair of breeches of a friend. In the course of the evening the lender called out to him, "J—, don't you sit down in the damp there in my breeches." A friend who condescended with the embryo critic upon this expose, offered to lend him a pair of unmentionables for the next meeting—he did so, and J— had hardly entered, when his benefactor exclaimed aloud, "J—, you may sit down wherever you like in my breeches."

The Chancellor of France mistaken for a Thief.—As M. Persil was proceeding to the Tuileries, with his portfolio under his arm, the sentinel who stood at the iron gate that opens towards the Rue Castiglione seeing the bundle, ran after the Minister and attempted to snatch it from him. The minister good-humouredly said, "No, no, it's too soon, for I have had it only two days."—Morning Post.

There were 41 letters in the Russian language, and not less than 214 in the Chinese. The Italian has only 20, and the Latin and Hebrew 22 each. The Sanscrit has 50, the Turkish 33, and the Persian 32.

Great preparations are making at the Academie for the first representation of the ballet founded upon Shakespeare's Tempest, in which Taglioni is to undertake the part of the "tricky Ariel."

Colony of Pigeons.—A Susquehanna (Pa.) County paper mentions that immense numbers of Pigeons have taken possession of, and appropriated to their use, a territory said to be nine miles in length, and two miles in width; every foot of which, and almost every tree and branch of a tree upon it, are constantly occupied by them. It is presumed that the beech woods are indebted for this pigeon visit, to the abundant crop of beech nuts this season.

Reward of Merit.—A day or two since, a certain well known member of the House of Assembly, (whose name bears a striking similarity to that of one of the editors of a celebrated literary periodical in this city,) was severely cow-hidled near the Exchange, in Wall street, by the indignant brother of a young lady whom he had grossly insulted.—N. Y. Times.
